①

Aaron McCollough's third book of poems, Little Ease, is forthcoming from Ahsahta Press in 2006. His previous books include Double Venus (Salt, 2003) and Welkin (Ahsahta, 2002). His poems have been published in or are forthcoming from various journals including FENCE, The New Review, The Canary, Verse, Colorado Review, and Bird Dog. He currently lives and teaches in Ann Arbor, MI.

②

Aaron Kiely lives in New York, grew up in Boston. He has a poetry book coming out from Ugly Duckling Presse in Brooklyn. He is currently working on a cover of "Holding Back The Years" by Simply Red and is looking for a recording contract. He is thrilled to be part of this series.

③

Aaron Tieger's poems have appeared or will appear in 6x6, Can We Have Our Ball Back, The Hat, Pettycoat Relaxer, Fulcrum Annual, and elsewhere. His newest chapbook, After Rilke, is due out in Fall 2005 from Anchorite Press. He lives in Ithaca, NY, where he is a member of the SOON Collective. He is the editor of CARVE Poems and is still trying to learn to ollie.

④

Aaron Kunin writes poetry, criticism, and novels. Folding Ruler Star, a collection of small poems about shame, is just out from Fence Books. He lives in California, where he is an assistant professor of negative anthropology at Pomona College

⑤

Aaron Belz's poems have been published in numerous journals, including Fence, McSweeney's and Boston Review, and in his second chapbook, Plausible Worlds, which Ron Silliman describes as "engaging the E! True Hollywood Story version of Americana as a landscape...a clean sort of post-NY school [poetry] with a dry wit that belies his MA in Creative Writing..."
